Sarel Cilliers

Charl (Sarel) Arnoldus Cilliers (7 September 1801 – 4 October 1871) was a Voortrekker leader and a preacher. With Andries Pretorius, he led the Boers to a huge victory over the Zulus at the Battle of Blood River in 1838. In particular, Cilliers led the Voortrekkers in a vow which promised that if God would protect them and deliver the enemy into their hands, they would build a church and commemorate the day of their victory as if it were an annual Sabbath day, which their descendants would also be instructed to honour.

Sarel was the best shooter that took part in the Battle of Blood River.

THE GRANITE JAW-BONE WAGON

Designed by Coert Steynberg at the request of the Blood River Monument Centenary Committee, the monument was only completed in 1939, but the unveiling had to wait until 1947 because of the Second World War. The monument is constructed from raw granite and was initially placed over the stone cairn in centre of the laager and had a window inside that allowed light to illuminate the rock cairn. It was moved to its current position in 1971 when the laager was erected." The wagon is symbolically seen as the home, fortress and church of the voortrekkers"
